The Art of Care and Support: Lessons from Photography and Social Media

Our style of relating and interpreting the world -- and therefore our social skills -- have changed greatly in the last twenty years. This presentation will examine specific aspects of other areas -- namely photography and social media -- with the goal of sharing how the art of care and support is subtly interwoven into our daily lives. The behavior analytic backbone of this presentation will suit persons working in all aspects of education or care giving. This topic is an extension of an ongoing topic of OXYGEN, which seeks to inspire support staff to consider their own well being as an important co-requisite to a balanced intervention plan. IMHO, you should come join us. LOL!
